How We Keep the El Centro Familia Going

I can’t talk for every office at CSU but I can speak on behalf of El Centro when I say “we are familia.” It’s not that often that a bunch of strangers are put together in a work-space and become as close as we all are.

Keeping the family together is hard work. We try to communicate proactively, whether it be in meetings, at work, or in school. No one is perfect and we have our differences. At the end of the day we have to look at what is important and what aligns with our family values.

It helps to bring us together when we do things outside of work with each other. We have gone on hikes, played games, and participated in countless teambuilding activities. Getting together to participate in these kind of bonding experiences could strengthen your own family and bring you closer together.

As Latinos, we know that Familia is most important to us. As times change we need to keep this center value a part of our culture. We must work hard to be the best we can be as individuals and as strongly bonded group who provides support.
